PREFACE

The first section of this catalogue, covering letters A-G, was published in 1938. According to the original intention it was to be followed, and the catalogue completed, by the publication of three further volumes of about the same size, namely 1,000 pages. Circumstances have however dictated a change of plan, and the present Section, covering letters H, I, J, and part of K, forms a substantially smaller volume. The 384 pages comprising it were already printed when the outbreak of war brought the Library's cataloguing activities to a standstill. Work on the catalogue was not resumed until 1949, and it was then considered necessary to effect some reduction in the scale of the portion remaining to be printed in order to hasten publication of the concluding volumes. The method adopted to this end was to employ a more concise form of cross-reference from author, editor, series, etc., to the main entry under title. The destruction by fire of the printing types which had been used before the War made necessary a change of fount also. Accordingly the decision was taken to issue the outstanding balance of the pre-war printings as Section II, uniform both in typography and in cataloguing style with Section I. It is in consequence of this decision that Section II ends awkwardly in the middle, not merely of a letter but of a proper name. It is felt however that those who use the catalogue will find this arrangement less inconvenient than the alternative of combining, within the covers of a single volume, two different founts and two different cataloguing styles.

The printing of the catalogue is proceeding, and it is expected that the work will be brought to a conclusion by the publication of two further sections intermediate in size between Sections I and II.
